ABSTRACT

An arrangement for identifying the geographical location of a caller in a network by using a gateway to insert an origin identifier tag into the header of the message, the tag including information which the network management system can use to determine the location from which the message originated.